University of Texas Austin

IFML Postdoctoral Fellow

2023 – present, University of Texas at Austin

Working on the foundations of reliable and efficient ML. My research aims at designing algorithms to learn from imperfect or corrupted datasets such as learning from noisy labels or from biased or censored data. I am particularly interested in developing principled, efficient, and practical algorithms.

Google

Research Intern

2022, Google Research, Mountain View

Worked on semi-supervised distillation. Developed a new practical distillation method called Student Label Mixing Distillation (SLaM) that improved the SOTA (published at NeurIPS 2023) and used it to improve distillation in Google products.

Grnet

Systems and Services Engineer

2016, Greek Research and Technology Network, Athens

Monitoring services, network, and servers, automation of procedures, development and maintenance of administration tools.

Education

University of Wisconsin-Madison

Ph.D., Computer Science, 2018 – 2023

Thesis: Learning From Imperfect Data: Noisy Labels, Truncation, and Coarsening
Advisor: Christos Tzamos

*National Technical
Uni. of Athens*

MEng, Electrical & Computer Engineering, 2011 – 2017

Thesis: Learning Powers of Poisson Binomial Distributions
Advisor: Dimitris Fotakis

Selected
Publications ¹

*COLT 2024
Best Paper Award*

Smoothed Analysis for Learning Concepts with Low Intrinsic Dimension
